DR. ABBOTT FOUND DEAD IN HIS BED

Secretary of State Board of Health Expires Suddenly at Newton.

Dr. Samuel Warren Abbott, secretary of the State Board of Health, was found dead in his bed in his house at Newton today. Dr. Abbott died of heart disease. Dr. Abbott was a native of Woburn and was born June 12, 1837. He was graduated from Brown University in 1858 and from Harvard Medical School four years later. He served as assistant surgeon in the army from 1861 to 1864 and resigned to become assistant surgeon of the First Massachusetts Cavalry, which position he held until the close of the war. Full from the above practice in Woburn. Later he moved to Newton and in 1872 to 1877 he was mayor of Middlesex county and was medical examiner from 1877 to 1881. He became secretary of the State Board of Health in 1881 and held the position to the time of his death. Dr. Abbott was a member of the American Medical Association, the American Public Health Association, the American Sanitary Association and the American Society of Great Britain and the Royal Society of the United States. Many monographs have been written to him on medical subjects and he wrote a noted book on "The Past and Present Condition of Public Hygiene and State Medicine in the United States."

TELEPHONES FIANCEE; THEN DEATH COMES

Boston Business Man Victim of Heart Disease in New York.

WAS ARRANGING WEDDING

Harry Graham Davenport, a Boston hotel man, connected with the paper stock firm of Hancher Bros., in Congress street, died today of heart failure in the apartment of Harold Hamilton, Larchmont, a relative of Thomas W. Lawson, at No. 122 West Fifty-eighth street, New York city, according to a brand wire dispatch to the BOSTON AMERICAN. A few minutes before his death, Davenport had called up his fiancée, in Springfield, by long distance telephone, and chatted with her for some time. He was then engaged in his business affairs, so that he could take a wedding trip. He was a widower, his wife, a sister-in-law of C. Irving Swan, a wealthy capitalist of Milton, Lower Mills, having died several years ago. He had lived with his fiancée, the latter had not been informed of Davenport's death when the news was conveyed to him this afternoon by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

FINANCES STAY IN NEW YORK.

Davenport was slightly over thirty years old. He was a native of England and left a title behind when he came to this country, but was thoroughly Americanized. He was found dead in his room soon after he had telephoned Springfield. Corner Jackson, of New York City, telegraphed death due to heart failure. His fiancée was notified and started immediately for New York from Springfield.

EMMONS TO WATCH SHARP FOR REPEATERS

Caution precautions to prevent repeating an election day have been taken by Judge Emonson in his order to the captains of the various police stations asking them to furnish the election constables with a list of the voters of Boston who will be met by force on election day and make it safe. This list will be furnished to all the election constables and should anyone attempt to vote in the house of the State Police for eleven years, he will be immediately ordered under arrest.

SLATTERY TO LEAVE BOARD FOR BUSINESS

In order that he may devote more time to his private business interests, Alonzo Charles H. Slattery, of Ward 14, has decided not to run for the board this year.

DOUGLAS SOUNDS KEYNOTE

In Telling Address at the Revere House He Pleads the People's Cause.

GIVEN A GREAT OVATION

"There is a more certain way of raising wages than by strikes. If the wage and salary earners make good use of their ballots, tariff taxes will soon be reduced; the trusts will take a back seat; prices and the cost of living will decline, and the incubus of Dingleyism will be lifted from our homes and our industries."

Thus the Hon. William L. Douglas, Democratic candidate for Governor, closed his thoughtful speech on the issues of the present campaign at the Revere House this afternoon.

The entire address was an enthusiastically received as it was impressively delivered. His introduction was the signal for loud applause and prolonged cheering. Mr. Douglas's speech was the culmination of a number of addresses from Democratic candidates in State and nation, which indicated the enthusiasm prevailing in the present campaign and the feeling of each State that the party possesses the right to choose for success at the polls.

The address made by former Mayor Nathan Matthews was devoted to a discussion of the great increase in the State debt since the last Democratic administration. This he stated amounted to more than 200 per cent. In the last ten years said Matthews, "the party will consider itself as defeated to continue its career of extravagance."

The Revere House was filled with prominent Democrats, who began to gather as early as noon, although the hour for the dinner was 1:30 o'clock.

The session had been planned to enable the State constables to make the members of the State Committee, the candidates for elective office and the Democratic ticket throughout Massachusetts and prominent visitors from outside the borders of the Bay State to come together, greet one another and hear the speaker.

"Redskins" From Carlisle in Fighting Trim as They Entered the Field—"Crimson's" Shouters Out in Full Force—Field Soft From Rain, and Hard-Fought Battle Is Looked For.

SOLDIERS FIELD, CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 22.—Red hot enthusiasm unbottled itself in great quantities here this afternoon for the first time this season.

The Indians—the "Red Skins" from Carlisle, minus red paint and feathers, but wearing football togs like veterans of old—had come to scatter the Crimson gore, and their dark brows looked fully able to do the trick.

Harvard, too, "bad cess to the rain," which made the field as soft and sticky as a freshly tarred roof, was dubious of the result.

Last year's score, Harvard 11, Carlisle 11, was made in a field as smooth and hard as the sun could make it, and still Harvard had a narrow escape.

Hurley's men fumble and slip on wet fields, hence the fear of the Crimson that a defeat may stare them in the face at the close of the day.

When the Indians came on the field a south wind was blowing across the Stadium at a twenty-knot rate, and this miniature gale promised to play havoc with kicks from the field and goal kicks. Glibby, who does the punting for the Indians, fears not the gales that blow, and early limbered up for some kicking stunts.

CROWDS POUR INTO STADIUM.

The crowd, Manager Ernst predicted, would reach 15,000. When the players came on the field there were fully that many in the Stadium, and across the rickety old bridge over the Charles hundreds more came pouring on foot and in autos and carriages.

There were girls in coats of all hues, but with flags only of one color, crimson, with the magic white H of the Harvard enthusiast. There were old grads wearing sweaters and overcoats and smoking huge pipes to remind them of their college days.

For the first time this season there was a real sure enough cheering section filled with lusty-lunged undergraduates, who, though they did not break loose until Hurley led his squad on the field at 2:50, warmed up under Captain Schuck of the track team, and that must have made the players of the Crimson feel good.

SHOCK LEADS CHEERING.

The cheering of the day was spontaneous and plentiful, and was given to cheer on a team Harvard's men fondly believe is the best turned out of Cambridge in years.

"An, I don't expect to see my boys again it will be one of the greatest wins, but they will certainly make achievements in the history of football as to find the victory."

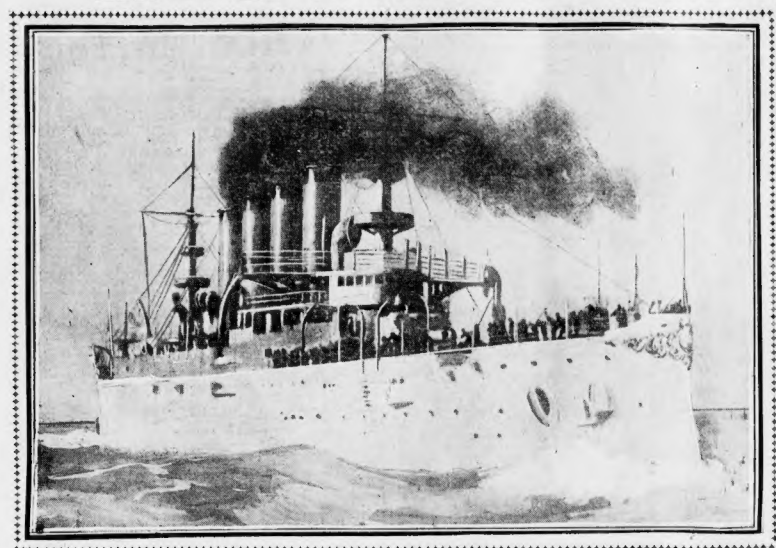

Said Coach Edward Rodgers to a BOSTON AMERICAN representative this morning at the Copsey Square Hotel, "My men will be enticed to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's gymnasium, where for one and a half inches they heat their sturdier opponents."

Her contract speed is twenty-two knots, and her actual speed is expected to be twenty-three knots. She is the fastest of her class, and will take place on Monday over the Cape Ann course. In the naming of the Colorado, as excepted was made in the rule naming cruisers after cities. WOMAN SEEKS 3000 BART POISON DEATH

Discouraged from lack of work, Mrs. Emily Watson, a nurse, living at No. 275 Shaw avenue, would have killed herself with arsenic if she had not told out of her fellow-laborers just after she swallowed the dose. She was treated in time at the hospital to save her life.

After in her room, she took a draught of ammonia, a carbolic acid preparation, and a strong emetic, she collapsed on the floor, but managed to drag herself to the door. She called to a woman in the next room.

"She (taken poison), tell Mrs. Davis," the lady called Mrs. E. A. Davis, the landlady, who called the police. Half an hour later Mrs. Watson was in a city hospital, where she was treated with arsenic, with a stomach pump, but safe from poison.

Mrs. Watson is given the best of chance, but she is in a very bad way. Her husband told her she had worked too hard, and she had been working too long. She has had practically no work since the summer and was completely discouraged.

There is anxiety, however, because it is feared that the exposure may be delayed for several weeks, even if favorable action is taken. With the approach of winter and the lack of any sign of betterment, there is a disposition on the part of her friends to hasten every resource. They are confident of winning in the end, they say, but to protect strikers from extortion as far as possible.

CANAL ZONE FIGHT PROVES TO BE WITH

PANAMA, Oct. 22.—The report of fighting east of the canal zone yesterday proves, on investigation, to have been due to a small invasion of Colombia, and not a clash between Panama and United States marines, as first reported by the press.

Three parties of marines have returned here after a skirmishing for the first time since the invasion of Colombia, and not a clash between Panama and United States marines, as first reported by the press.

The officers credit last night fighting, and the marines have not been confirmed. If the facts have been suppressed in the reports given to the press, the canal zone police will reinforce the marines, and should demonstrate the power of the United States in restoring order.

ECZEMA

Affects Every Age and Condition.

Cuticura.

If there were not another external skin disease known, eczema would be sufficient inflection on mankind. It periodically attacks the human race, usually through generations. While some are constantly enveloped in it, others have it confined to small patches in the form of a rash. It may appear on the palms of the hands, on the limbs, etc., but everywhere its distinctive feature is a small watery blister, which discharges itself, leaving a raw, itchy sore. The itching, and intense itching, scaling and crusting.

Story of Present-Day Life in Boston

long as I lived, though I suppose Mrs long as I lived, though I suppose Mrs. Pangbourne and Tweedledum were rejoicing and looking forward to it as the realization of their hopes. Tweedledum will be wild at me, and I shall have to put up with some of his abuse. I shall have to see me to-morrow, but I don't say so."

"That's an example of the good side of us," said Guy, laughing. "We're very poor rogues, really, Lilian, and I don't know how much longer we can keep this up. We would have parted with that two thousand a year if I only had let her husband die."

"I'd sooner go without the money," said Lilian; "but there's one thing I do realize—that if I don't get my position, I shall be George Tweedledum and myself are none the wiser."

"Verily. He forced me to do what he wanted by threatening to give me away over my legging. Well, he can't do that any more, if it is to be a success. He will, both he and Violet will be placed in a very awkward position. I expect what he wants is to be me to be careful."

"No! I have never seen him alone," replied Lillian; "but he will find that he has to do so. He will have to come to the house so that he should give me a fresh start. It's a horrible sensation, Guy, to feel that you are being deceived. I have lost $10,000 dollars, and I don't know where I am to turn for more."

"Don't worry," Borradaile, said Guy thoughtfully. "From what you have told me, she ought to pay up arrears." Lillian looked up quickly. "Has she received any money?"

"Yes. She's living alone."

"Where is her son?"

"About to be married. I am bringing Esther back as soon as he could safely leave his mother. I suppose (they'll be married soon). The girl is a very nice girl, but I don't like her. She was in his mind." Lillian, you have told me a great deal about this wretched Borradaile, and how you got mixed up with them. I don't want to tell you more. But you and you have decided that there are to be no secrets between us. Is there anything more that you should tell me, my dear Mary Borradaile?

It was a few moments before Lillian replied. Then she passed her thin finger over her brow as if her head pained her.

"No," she said. "There is no legal objection. It is true that the man to whom she was secretly married is dead. But, nevertheless, she is still bound by the law for Earth. If she could forget him. It was for her good that I implored her to do this, that I came to you and begged you to use your influence to prevent the marriage. When she said she would still be true to her husband much of it as I dare. 'I'm very fond of him, you are, Guy, and I should not like her to be unhappy.'"

"I heard a little boy tell his mother why he liked his teacher the other day. 'She can see both ways,' he said. 'She can see when you're bad and she can see when you're good, too, and she tells you one just as quick as she does the other. Most of 'em just tell you the bad.'"

What's the use of only "telling the bad"? I don't believe in it. If my little son's face is unusually clean at the age when a clean face is a miracle I believe in saying, "Why, how fine you look today! You look good!"

No Disease in the Jap Army

An American Surgeon Tells of the Greatest Japanese Triumph—It's a Lesson to the World

A paper before the Association of Military Surgeons at St. Louis that contained some marvellous information. When Japan began to prepare for fighting the greatest attention was paid to the medical department. A great Japanese medical authority said the Russians may put 2,000,000 in the field. Many of them will die from army life diseases. Japan will put 500,000 men in the field. None will die from other causes than collisions in battle.

Up to July 1 there were no diseases in the Japanese army. There were no typhoid and other intestinal diseases that marked the camps of Alger, Chickamauga and Miami during the Spanish-American war. During our war with Spain seventy per cent. of the soldiers that perished died from disease. Two hundred and sixty men were killed, and 3,862 died in camps.

Up to July 1 the proportion of Japanese soldiers dying from disease to those killed was two per cent. The Japanese have abolished sickness from the army.

They did it, Dr. Seamen says, by testing all water to be used for drinking. The soldiers were lectured on the proper foods to eat. The smallest squad has a portable bath. So thorough are the Japanese that the soldiers are directed to keep their finger nails closely pared and clean.

Of the thousand returned wounded to Tokio before July 1 not one died. There are no fever camps, as there were in this country six years ago.

Thus Japan saves all her troops for the bullet. The "silent foe," says the military observer, claims none.

The peaceful nations can learn from Japan that disease is a matter of neglect.

CHANCE FOR DEMOCRATS TO TURN OUT TODAY.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN.

I use by your conservative paper that two distinguished Democratic leaders from the South are to address the Democrats of Boston tomorrow. Let the masses of the North and South unite in a hearty welcome, breathing out their best wishes with a peace that will keep all before it.

The Japanese army engaged in shooting the Russians is teaching the rest of the world how to live. The great lesson of this war is that death from disease incident to campaigning can be prevented.

Major Louis Seamen, a military medical man back from Japan, read before the Association of Military Surgeons at St. Louis that contained some marvellous information. When Japan began to prepare for fighting the greatest attention was paid to the medical department.

A great Japanese medical authority said the Russians may put 2,000,000 in the field. Many of them will die from army life diseases. Japan will put 500,000 men in the field. None will die from other causes than collisions in battle.

THINGS YOU SOMETIMES SEE

INNOCENCE

We've Waked Up Now

By James Montague

PERHAPS we hardly noticed that election time was near; Perhaps we slumbered idly till the day was almost here; Perhaps we wondered daily at the rumors of the fight That floated from the city bells where the speakers stood at night; Perhaps we've just been dreaming for a spell; but anyhow, Whatever may have happened,

No more you find us dozing in the fall, lethargic way That marks the tired residents of Philadelphia; No more you find us asking who the candidates may be, Or hanging round our hearthstones in the deepest apathy. We've waked up now, and we're not to be trifled with; Whatever may have happened,

Bring forth your own proceedings, let heads blow out their din; Give us a torch and hammer, and notice us join in. It may be hard to rouse us here in aged Boston town, But once we're up and going, who it's hard to keep us down. We've waked up now, and we're not to be trifled with; And though we HAVE been sleeping,

We've waked up now.
